Ambition Belonging Courage

In drawing club this week...

This has been the first of two books linked to space. The children have found out some interesting facts about stars and planets and have enjoyed building rockets and spaceships. Many have written short sentences and stories about going to space.

In maths this week...

This week we have been using our math skills in different ways. In the outside area we have been counting hidden stars and measuring liquids in the water tray. We have made spaceships out of 2D shapes and tried drawing stars, which is not the easiest. We have continued finding one more and one less than a given number. We have also explored writing our own number sentences for both addition and subtraction.

This week ...

We have loved hearing about all that you have been up to over the half term and the children have come back excited for their last half term in EYFS. This half term tends to be fast and furious with lots going on which can affect the children, so lots of rest when you can is something we would advice. This week we have assessed the children's phonics and will be regrouping them for next week just in case your child comes home with different books.

How to help at home...

We know its not to do with the current topic but if you have a dinosaur lover and have not been yet. I would consider going to Tilgate park to see the amazing dinosaurs. How about a bit of star gazing? If you are not sure what they are there are some lovely apps that will help you. With the current weather perhaps you could make a rain catcher and see how much rain you can catch.
